Terry Igo Selected As Trustee At Hodges University

SANIBEL ISLAND, FL (February 12, 2011) – Terry Igo, the President of the Sanibel Captiva Trust Company, has been named to the Board of Trustees at Hodges University.

Igo will bring his broad range of experience in Southwest Florida business and philanthropy to Hodges.

“Terry Igo is a highly popular and successful community leader, and we are honored that he has accepted our invitation to be a member of our governing board,” said Dr. Terry McMahan, Hodges University president. “His passion for education as well as his drive to make a difference in our community will be skill sets that will be beneficial to our institution. He exemplifies the values essential to Hodges. Given his background, commitments and expertise, he will make an outstanding addition to our Board.”

Igo presented Sanibel’s Francis Bailey with the Hodges University Luminary Award on February 3 at a luncheon at Sanibel Harbour Marriot Resort & Spa.

Igo serves as advisor to many area non-profit organizations, helping to increase the awareness of philanthropic giving and estate planning to benefit individuals and their charities. He is a board member of the Sanibel Community Association, and a member of the Grants Advisory Committee of the Southwest Florida Community Foundation.
